

Getting it "Write"

Helping Our English Learners Edit and Revise their Written Work

---

In this session, we'll dive into the editing and revision stage of the writing process. Whether your English learners are crafting personal, workplace or academic writing, they need the skills and strategies that all good writers use to edit and revise their work.

We'll address the questions of when to give feedback, how much to give, and which techniques encourage learners' autonomy and agency. We'll also discuss the role of revision and editing in academic, workplace and community settings.

By the end of our time together, participants should be able to analyze and refine their feedback techniques and help their English learners make use of a variety of self-editing strategies.
