Promoting Career Pathways in Adult Literacy
Do Volunteers Have a Role?

Low-skilled workers have been hit especially hard by the recent recession. November 2010 federal labor statistics reflect a 15.7 percent unemployment rate for adults with less than a high school diploma—almost double that of adults with some college or an associate’s degree.

It’s becoming increasingly difficult for adults to find economically self-sustaining work without some level of postsecondary education; a trend that will likely continue as the economy begins to recover. According to the U.S. Department of Education, approximately 90 percent of the fastest growing jobs of the future will require education or training beyond high school.

So what can adult educators do to help? How can we better reach the 70 percent of adult education students who don’t enter postsecondary education? And how do we best serve lower level students who may be years away becoming proficient in English or getting a GED?

The recently launched Adult Education Career Pathways initiative by the Florida

The Connection Between Domestic Violence and Financial Literacy

Seventy-five percent of Americans fail to connect domestic violence with economic abuse and the need for financial literacy. However, research shows that domestic violence survivors are more likely to leave abusive relationships if they are financially independent (Integrating Asset-Building Strategies into Domestic Violence Advocacy, 2009).

In addition to physical or emotional abuse, domestic violence victims can also suffer economic abuse, which is a control tactic used by abusers to block access to money, prohibit victims from getting or keeping jobs, destroying victims’ credit, and other tactics that limit their ability to break free and survive financially.

Research indicates that a survivor’s decision to stay in an abusive situation is often based more on concerns about economic dependency than on physical safety (www.allstatenewsroom.com).

Judy Postmus, a professor at Rutgers University and director of the Center on Violence Against Women, discovered that victims of abuse are better able to address their financial needs after going through a curriculum on money management.

A study of 120 domestic abuse survivors in 10 states showed that after participating...
Advocacy Workshop Builds Effective Local Partnerships and Collaboration

The National Coalition for Literacy (NCL) and the Florida Literacy Coalition are pleased to present a symposium on grassroots advocacy for adult education practitioners during the Florida Literacy Conference.

The session will feature practical, hands-on strategies for planning and implementing a successful grassroots advocacy program. Participants will discuss strategies and tactics on how to successfully integrate advocacy with community and business partnerships. Invited speakers include national advocacy experts from the adult education field, policy makers from Florida, and representatives of successful local partnerships and collaborations.

Through the generous support of the Dollar General Literacy Foundation, NCL will offer two competitive $5,000 grants to participating organizations to build their state, regional or local advocacy programs. Attendance at this session is required to apply for this grant.

There is no fee to attend this program. Due to high demand, pre-registration is required and participants will be required to attend the full day session.

When: May 3, 2011. Complimentary breakfast and lunch will be provided.
Time: 10 a.m. – 4 p.m. Registration begins at 9:30 am.
Where: Orlando Marriott Lake Mary
Registration Deadline: Friday, March 25. Space is limited, so register now. Additional information and registration are available at www.floridaliteracy.org.

Low-Income Families Can Stay Connected with Free Cell Phones

Low-income Floridians are able to apply for a free cell phone, equipped with 150-250 monthly minutes, from Assurance Wireless and Safelink Wireless. Both companies also provide individuals with the option to add additional features and minutes for a nominal fee.

The service is funded by the Universal Service Fund, a non-profit organization created by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). Individuals who are interested in this service can visit the companies’ websites for eligibility requirements. Generally, individuals receiving government benefits such as Federal Public Housing Assistance, Food Stamps, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families and Medicaid will qualify.

For more information about these programs, please visit www.assurancewireless.com or www.safelinkwireless.com. Interested individuals can also call 1-800-392-3850 for Assurance and 1-800-977-3768 for Safelink.

FLC Accepting Application for Health Literacy Grant Opportunity

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Florida (BCBSF) and the Florida Literacy Coalition (FLC) are pleased to announce the availability of mini-grants of up to $5,000 to support health literacy programs throughout the state.

Low health literacy costs an estimated $73 billion a year in the form of longer hospital stays, emergency room visits, increased doctor visits and increased medication. Adults with low literacy levels often fail to engage in early detection and preventative health care. They also have significant difficulties in navigating the health care system and following their doctor’s treatment plans.

Applicants must be nonprofit or government-based agencies providing adult ESOL and/or family literacy instruction in Florida. Services may be delivered via classes, small groups and one-to-one tutoring.

The application and guidelines may be accessed through the Florida Literacy Coalition’s website at www.floridaliteracy.org. Proposals must be received no later than February 23, 2011. For questions, please contact Naomi Soto (407) 246-7110 ext. 209 or via e-mail at soton@floridaliteracy.org.
Adult Education Career Pathways Useful as a Transition Tool for Students

Department of Education (FLDOE) is dedicated to developing a statewide system to significantly increase the number of students who enter postsecondary education and earn a degree, certificate or industry credential. Over $7.8 million in competitive grants have been offered to adult education and literacy providers in Florida’s 67 counties to facilitate and implement this vision.

This initiative provides a great opportunity to strengthen ties and build relationships among local adult education and literacy providers, post-secondary institutions, workforce boards and other key community stakeholders. County or regional steering committees will be established under the grant to help develop local five-year strategic plans. Community-based organizations with expertise in training, coordinating and utilizing volunteers have the potential to play an important role in this process. Volunteers trained as mentors or coaches can help students explore their career and educational options and create career development plans.

Our Adult Education Career Pathways System includes all students developing a career and education plan by using the state’s career information delivery system, Florida CHOICES or a similar system.

A Few Available Resources

- Florida CHOICES is the state career information delivery system. It provides career and educational exploration and information. Florida CHOICES includes assessments for interests, aptitudes, skills, and values. Accountability reports for management of student usage are retrievable from the Professional Tools section of CHOICES. www.flchoices.org
- Florida’s Adult Education Career Pathways initiative was formally presented via web telecast from the Florida Department of Education and ACE of Florida. The 2-hour broadcast provided a comprehensive overview of where the field is headed with the initiative and how adult education and literacy programs can participate. The recorded broadcast is available online at: http://bit.ly/evpQV.
- A Cross-Case Analysis of Career Pathway Program that Link Low-Skilled Adults to Family-Sustaining Wage Careers. http://tinyurl.com/4stu4v

Frontline Education Coalition (FLC) will support this effort by providing professional development, technical assistance and a forum to share resources, ideas and promising practices on how to effectively utilize volunteers to enhance and expand transitions and career pathways. Stay tuned to FLC’s website and blog for updates and more information as it becomes available.

FLC welcomes David Weiss, our new VISTA volunteer working on social media and career pathway initiatives. David Weiss is from Port St. Lucie, Fla., and received a Masters in Political Science from Florida State University in 2009. His experience includes working for Undergraduate Programs at Florida State, working and volunteering for a non-profit summer camp and interning for the Florida State House of Representatives.

We bid farewell and good luck to outgoing VISTA volunteer, Raychel George. She has done a wonderful job here at FLC and will be moving on to work for the Holocaust Memorial Resource and Education Center of Florida in Maitland, Fla.

Since 1962, when Ruth started LVA, she has authored nine books and traveled all over the United States and the world giving Basic Literacy and ESOL workshops. The recipient of nine honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters degrees, Ruth was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President George W. Bush in 2006.
Pre-Conference Events, Tuesday, May 3

Train the Trainer Course
10:00 AM-6:00 PM
$25.00 (lunch included)
Facilitators: Ellen Lauricella & Roberta Reiss
For full description, see page 7 of this newsletter.

Building Effective Local Partnerships and Collaborations
10:00 AM-4:00 PM
Facilitators: Marsha L. Tait
A dynamic exploration into how our interests align with businesses and policy-makers, so that we can make adult education and literacy a top priority for our communities, our state and our country. For more information, see page 2 of this newsletter.

From Research to Practice: Instructional Strategies to Build Learner Engagement and Increase Language Proficiency
1:00-4:00 PM
Facilitator: Heide Spruck Wrigley, PhD
We will demonstrate and discuss a number of instructional strategies designed to build a community of learners, and engage students in language and literacy activities found to be successful in adult ESL. Teaching strategies will be linked to a Teaching-Learning Framework that can be adapted to any level and any theme. We will also explore how multi-media can be used to increase listening comprehension and conversations skills, and how sub skills such as grammar and pronunciation can be integrated into a meaning-based curriculum. Participants will receive written descriptions of some of the key strategies and sample materials to try out in their classrooms. Sponsored by Region III Training Council.

STAYING HEALTHY: A Comprehensive Health Literacy Resource Guide for ESOL
1:00-4:00 PM
Facilitator: Naomi Soto
Learn how to successfully integrate health literacy into high-beginning and low-intermediate level adult ESOL instruction. Increase health literacy awareness among your students and encourage them to make healthy choices in relation to nutrition, preventative health care, accessing health services, and other related issues. This 3-hour session includes an overview of the freely available Staying Healthy curriculum, hands-on activities/resources and time for discussion and idea sharing. Each participant will receive a copy of the Staying Healthy Student and Teacher’s Resource Guide. Sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Florida.

Adult Learner Day, May 4

Adult education, literacy and ESOL students are encouraged to attend the Conference as our guests for a full day of activities. This year’s offerings were coordinated by a committee of adult learners. Session topics will address areas including learner leadership, involvement and skills development.

For more details, go to www.floridaliteracy.org.

Conference Scholarships Available

Are you having a difficult time finding resources to attend the Florida Literacy Conference? A limited number of registration and travel scholarships are available to practitioners and volunteers working in adult and family literacy programs. Visit www.floridaliteracy.org for more information.

Tutor Tips

DRAW MY ROOM

Purpose: To practice vocabulary related to things in the house, prepositions and prepositional phrases

Preparation Time: 5 minutes

Materials: Pencils and paper

Preparation: Draw a simple picture of a favorite room in your house.

Procedure:

1) Tell the students that you are going to describe a favorite room in your house. They must draw the room as you describe it. They may use squares, rectangles or circles to depict furniture, but they should label everything in the drawing.

2) When you finish describing the room, students compare their pictures to the one you drew before class.

3) Put students into pairs. They should decide who will describe and who will draw first.

4) Students do the activity. When the first person has finished describing, the person drawing should show their partner the picture, and the two correct any mistakes.

5) Then the partners should switch roles and do step 4 again.

In 2010, Florida’s Office of Program Policy Analysis and Government Accountability (OPPAGA) was directed by the Florida Legislature to examine the adult education programs operated by school districts and Florida Colleges. The following OPPAGA reports were released in December.

1.) Profile of Florida’s Public Workforce Education
Program Providers by Service Area

Report Highlights:
• Florida’s workforce education programs help individuals attain skills needed to become or remain economically self-sufficient. These programs provide training designed to meet local and state workforce needs and help Florida compete in the global economy by building a broadly based, highly skilled and productive workforce.

• Workforce education programs include both postsecondary career education and adult education programs. Postsecondary career education programs prepare individuals for specific occupations and award various credentials upon completion. In the 2008-09 school year, Florida’s school districts and colleges served approximately 187,000 students. Adult general education programs provide literacy, basic skills and English language training to help individuals improve their job performance and/or move to higher paying jobs. Districts and colleges served approximately 320,000 students in adult education programs in the 2008-09 school year.

• School districts also provide career education programs for high school students that enable students to earn industry certifications and postsecondary credit. High school students may take career education courses to earn secondary credit, or they may participate in dual enrollment opportunities with a district technical center or college to earn postsecondary credit. School districts and colleges have local authority to decide what workforce education programs to provide in their service areas and how to organize program delivery. As a result, workforce education programs vary throughout the state, as does the division of responsibility between districts and colleges.

• This report profiles each college service area, detailing which entity (school district or college) provides workforce education programs and enrollment numbers for these programs during the 2008-09 school year. The report also includes a list of any programs that were duplicated by the college and district in the same county.

2.) Consolidating Workforce Education Would Bring
More Uniformity; Mixed Results on Whether Evidence
Supports Other Stakeholder Arguments

Report Highlights:
• Currently, school districts and Florida colleges share responsibility for state funded workforce and adult education programs. Recently there have been proposals to give colleges responsibility for all postsecondary career education programs and school districts responsibility for all adult education programs.

• Such a reorganization could have advantages and disadvantages. It could produce more uniform policies and practices, provide better alignment and articulation of postsecondary career education programs, and increase students’ access to financial aid. However, it could also limit availability of open entry and open exit training programs and reduce resource sharing between districts’ secondary and postsecondary career education programs. Consolidating adult education programs under school districts could help school districts’ efforts to address dropout prevention and recovery.

Both studies are free to download at http://bit.ly/goxMvX.

Florida’s Refugee Services Program has extended an open invitation to Florida’s adult education and literacy providers to join one of seven refugee task forces located throughout the state.

The participants are representatives of various government agencies, private not-for-profit organizations and mutual assistance associations. Task force meetings focus on areas such as: refugee program service needs and possible solutions to meet these needs, sharing of best practices, collaboration building among agencies, and sharing information about events, funding opportunities and trainings.

Each taskforce typically meets six times per year. If you are interested in participating please contact the coordinator from your area.

Creative Ways Social Media Can Help Raise Funds and Awareness

Facebook users may have noticed this past December that many users had changed their profile picture to that of a favorite childhood cartoon character. These changes were made in response to a unique campaign that sought to encourage people to remember their childhoods, while also joining the fight against child abuse. So what does changing your Facebook picture have to do with actually fighting child abuse?

This project was initiated by a volunteer who wanted to bring general attention to violence against children. Soon after child abuse prevention organizations began to see an increase in donations. PreventChildAbuse.org, reported a 400 percent increase over normal donations levels due to the Facebook campaign.

Social media sites, including Facebook and Twitter, have proven to be effective in building new communities of donors. Stacey Monk of Epic Change says her nonprofit has raised nearly all of its money via Twitter, helping to build classrooms in Tanzania, provide skills training and buy school supplies. This medium has real potential to help literacy programs connect with volunteers and potential donors. If your organization has employed social media to support your cause, we’d like to hear from you at FLC.

Free Tax Return Preparation and Earned Income Tax Credit Information

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program offers free tax help to people who need assistance in preparing their tax returns. Certified volunteers sponsored by various organizations receive training to help prepare basic tax returns in communities across the country. VITA sites are generally located at community and neighborhood centers, libraries, schools, shopping malls and other convenient locations. Most locations also offer free electronic filing.

The earned income tax credit (EITC) is a federal tax credit provided to low-to moderate-income workers. This credit is not automatically issued; people who wish to receive the EITC must apply for it when they file their federal income taxes. This tax credit can have a great impact on families in our state. A single parent with two children, with an income of $40,363, can receive up to $5,000 in the form of a tax refund.

To find a VITA site near you or to get more information about the Earned Income Tax Credit, call 1-800-829-1040, or visit www.irs.gov.

Report Focuses on Adult English Language Learners with Limited Literacy

Adult English language learners who lack native language literacy skills often encounter special challenges in their lives and their efforts to learn English. Educators are challenged by how best to help these adults gain English literacy skills.

A National Institute for Literacy Report released last fall examines a variety of research, including that on language acquisition, cognition and brain functioning, adult education, literacy development, and professional development. Though research on this group of learners is limited, this report suggests that these individuals need programs and classes separate from those for other beginning-level ESOL learners, with special attention paid to cultural influences and their experiences in school.

This paper addresses the following questions to offer guidance on meeting the needs of this population:

- What are their language and literacy strengths and needs?
- How do they differ from language learners with prior schooling and native language literacy?
- What considerations are relevant for the programs in which they enroll?
- What motivates them to learn English?
- What do teachers need to know to be effective with them?

in a financial literacy curriculum, 88 percent of the participants had set financial goals for themselves. Additionally, more than three-quarters had created a budget, over two-thirds reported they had begun paying off debts or looked up their credit history, and 22 percent started a retirement account (news.rutgers.edu/).

“Women with financial skills have an increased chance of getting away from an abusive situation and sustaining themselves and their families on a long-term basis,” said Sue Else, president of National Network to End Domestic Violence (www.csrwire.com).

“Programs focused on teaching women financial skills positively impact domestic violence survivors’ lives,” said Michele Coleman Mayes of the Allstate Insurance Foundation. Allstate has created a financial literacy curriculum in conjunction with the National Network to End Domestic Violence (www.womensgazette.com).

Obesity Rate High Among Low-Income Undereducated Women

New research indicates that education is a significant factor in the growing rate of obesity in women. Women who have less education and live in low-income households are more likely to be obese than women with higher education and income levels. Forty-two percent of women lacking a high school diploma were obese, a rate 19 percent higher than women with a college education. “The less education you have, the more likely you are to be obese,” said Cynthia Ogden, a researcher and epidemiologist.

According to The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one in three adults in the U.S. are obese. Obesity is defined as 30 or more pounds over a healthy weight.

The recent study, Obesity and Socioeconomic Status in Adults: United States, 2005–2008, determined that income and education impacted women’s rates of obesity more so than men. Early speculation blames environmental factors such as a lack of physical activity, access to parks and recreational facilities, and easy access to fast and unhealthy food for the rise in obesity. Others say lower-income men tend to have more physically demanding employment.

Obesity rates have grown in the past two decades at staggering rates. A study released by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation called Fast in Fat: How Obesity Threatens America’s Future 2010, reported that 38 states, including Florida, have obesity rates over 25 percent.

People who are obese are at increased risk for type 2 diabetes, cardiovascular disease, hypertension, coronary artery disease, stroke, sleep apnea and certain cancers.

“Understanding what you eat, how much you eat, that food portions must be monitored, and that all food beverages except water have calories, are all factors that play a role in your health,” Ogden said.

The Florida Health Literacy Initiative works with literacy organizations across the state to implement and expand health literacy instruction. Staying Healthy is an ESOL health literacy curriculum that includes lessons on nutrition. If you would like to order Staying Healthy, please visit www.floridaliteracy.org. County offices of Florida WIC Nutrition Services for Women, Infants and Children can also help schools and literacy organizations present health information in English, Spanish and Creole. Technology Corner: Shorten Lengthy Web Addresses

Two websites, TinyURL.com and bit.ly provide free internet tools used to shorten lengthy web addresses also known as URLs.

Posting these URLs in email communications or newsletters can be problematic as links that are several lines long will often break and are difficult to manually type without error. These tools also come in handy when your space, or character count, is limited, like when using Twitter (140 character limit).

For example, a direct link to information about the 2011 State Literacy Awards looks like this:

We used TinyURL.com and reconfigured it into http://tinyurl.com/236uj83

When shortened with TinyURL.com and bit.ly, the link is truncated and simply redirects the user to the original URL. Regardless of which link chosen, the user will still get to the same web page.

This web site aims to help students to memorize vocabulary in an easy and efficient way, by using pictures, sounds and games. www.learningchocolate.com

Audio News Reader
The CBBC Newsround has an separate Accessible Newsreader for much of their content that is attractively designed and provides audio support for the text. www.bbc.co.uk/cbbc/newsreader

Voz Me
A simple text-to-speech tool, students just need to copy a word a few sentences from something they’re reading and paste it on one of these sites. They will immediately hear the word pronounced. Students can do the same with their own writing to double-check if it “sounds” right. vozme.com/index.php?lang=en
