

Henry Mack has been appointed the Chancellor for Career, Technical and Adult Education at the Florida Department of Education, a position he has held since November 2019. Prior to serving as Chancellor, he was the associate vice president for workforce education and innovation at Broward College, helping to oversee all of the college's career and technical education programs, its innovation and entrepreneurship hub, and a variety of other economic development related initiatives.

Mr. Mack also served as an associate dean of academic affairs at Broward College, and held positions at Florida International University and the University of Miami as a philosophy professor. He served as host of South Florida PBS Viewpoint and Issues, two weekly television shows dedicated to exploring issues in public policy, ethics, and religion. He has graduate degrees in philosophy and theology from the Catholic University of America and is completing his Ed.D in education administration from the University of Miami.

Welcome Dr. Mack!
