

Calling all Teachers and Tutors!

Want to improve your skills as an instructor? Would you like to learn about new lesson plans, fresh strategies, and resources that are available to you? Come to one of our free regional symposiums which will provide you with hands-on, multi-sensory teaching techniques. Topics covered will include:

Teaching Conversational English: Learning to speak is a top priority for most English learners, whether beginning or more advanced. Listening and comprehension skills are vital components to conversation. Exercises and activities for beginner ELL's as well as lesson planning for multi-level conversation classes will be presented.

Learning to Achieve: Written Expression: Topics include teaching spelling and composition skills. Explore the concept and practice of self-regulated strategies that have proven their effectiveness with adult learners.

Authentic & Visual Materials for GED and Pre-GED Preparation: The new GED test requires students to understand and respond to a greater number of graphs, charts, and other visual items. The session offers ideas and materials for creating lessons, and providing practice using authentic materials.
